The IIS server hosts applications for sites that use IIS. When SharePoint updates the IIS server, all the apps hosted on the IIS server are stopped. After updating the server, I have to restart the IIS service to get the apps to start up again. How can I prevent this from happening? Ideally, I'd like IIS to take care of restarting the apps on its own, without having to restart the IIS service. A: I haven't ever used IIS, but if I'm reading the IIS documentation correctly, you should be able to configure IIS to automatically restart apps when updates are installed. IIS 7.x and IIS 7.5 When you install an update for a managed application, the IIS service starts the web application and any worker process for the application. Configure an application to be restarted on update: Go to the Applications section of the Web Platform Installation Wizard. Select an application to be restarted. Click Next. Select OK. IIS 7.0 In the IIS Configuration section of the Web Platform Installation Wizard, select an application to be restarted on install.
